Trusted by market leaders across the critical minerals supply chain

Argus provides independent pricing and market analysis that support governments worldwide in advancing policy frameworks and market transparency initiatives. Its metals price assessments are widely referenced by public institutions in countries including Australia, Japan, South Korea and the US.

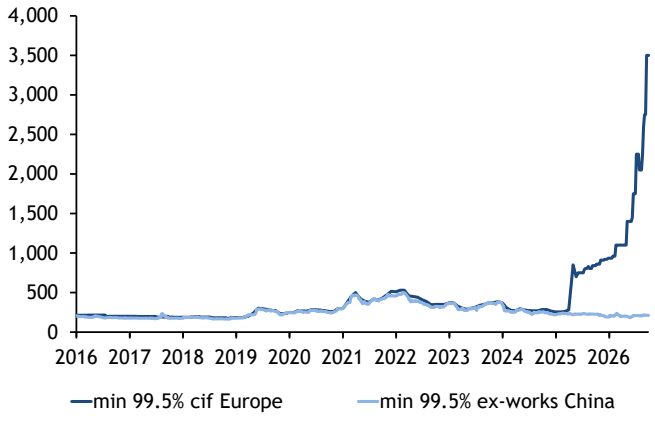

Governments are placing increasing emphasis on critical minerals security and supply chain resilience and Argus is playing an active role in supporting dialogue between industry and policy makers. Argus' expertise in pricing, market structure and trade flows helps stakeholders better understand market developments and identify opportunities in a rapidly evolving landscape.

Beyond metals, Argus teams assist government policy makers across the fertiliser, agriculture, energy and biofuel sectors in Europe, the US, Japan, Indonesia and Australia.

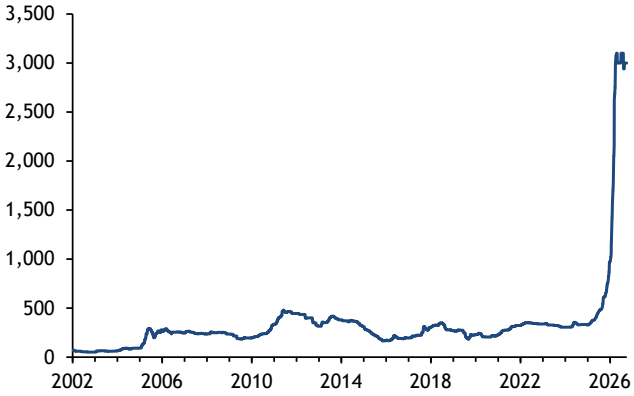

Argus metals pricing

Argus has more than 20 years of experience in providing independent pricing of ferrous and non-ferrous metals and is widely recognised in the global metals market for the quality of its assessments, methodological rigour and balanced coverage. As a result, Argus metal prices are trusted by market participants around the world and are used widely by producers and buyers for market intelligence and as benchmark references in physical supply contracts.
